Cooperation Agreement with the Royal Institute for Religious Studies

A cooperation agreement was signed with the Royal Institute for Religious Studies that includes the implementation of a project entitled "Living Together in Harmony". It aims to promote the concepts of reconciliation and the culture of dialogue among the diverse communities in Jordanian society by building the capacities of the participants in several topics, the most important of which are human rights, dialogue, and communication. The project will focus on promoting music as an important tool for expression and dialogue while adopting an informal education methodology based on social-emotional learning methods around the concepts of citizenship, human rights, difference, diversity, pluralism, dialogue, interdependence, and communication.

Volunteers' Program concluded a training titled "Management of Entrepreneurial Projects" for youth groups in Al-Wassieh/Karak city...

"A world where women are marginalized is a sterile world because women don't just bear life but transmit to us the ability to see otherwise, they see things differently," Francis said. "They transmit to us the ability to understand the world with different eyes, to understand things with hearts that are more creative, more patient, more tender.
